

The great cookie crime

To all pupils this is an emergency, a couple of weeks ago a truly terrible crime took place. Mrs Jones was enjoying a well-earned break with a cup of tea and some nice biscuits, when she had to go and take a call from a loving parent. When she returned a heinous crime had been acted out. Her biscuits had GONE even the nut filled ones.

Over the last couple of weeks, she has found clues and been given some from a secretive witness that she needs help figuring out. Attached ,to this call for help, you will find the five clues and a list of suspects.

Can you help Mrs Jones work out who this rich tea terror is? Is it who you expected or someone you'd never have thought it would be?

Why not make a prediction now about who you think it was?

The suspects

This is the list comprised of suspects that Mrs Jones has drawn up, she thought about who she thought would be most likely and put them at the top does it match with your prediction?

Clue 1

The witness has left a clue hoping you will work it out. The clue says that all the mistakes when added together will help you to work out something important about the villain. Mrs Jones has worked out the first letter of the clue can you work out the rest? Hint the mistakes might be missing letters or they may have made mistakes with capitals.

The vulture lurks in the savanna, waiting for its meal. The vulture waits for the lion to have its attention turned. They wait patiently for this opportune moment and then swoop from up high. Then they start meal that should have been someone else's. don't you agree that the vulture is a sneaky Bird? Rest assured the vulture only does this to survive, otherwise they may starve and not thrive. I hope you never have to deal with a sneaky creature like a vulture.

Clue 2

The second clue was just as difficult, the witness left a sentence in what seemed to be a made up language. Mrs Jones managed to work out it was a code but couldn't work out all the letters can you help her?

Clue 3

The third clue that Mrs Jones found was a muddy footprint on the floor near the biscuits. She needs help working out the size of the footprint and found a way to work it out. 2 squares on the grid equals 1 shoe size. She has given you some co-ordinates you need to plot and join up in order to give yourself the shape of the footprint, then you need to measure it.

(5,4) (6,4) (7,4) (8,6) (8,8) (9,10) (9.5,11) (9,12) (8,14) (6,14)
(4,12) (4,10) (4,6) (5,4).

Clue 4

The fourth clue left by the witness was in the form of a riddle that Mrs Jones found in post it notes around her room can you work out what the riddle is trying to tell her.

Clue 5

The final clue has to do with whether the villain had the chance to steal the biscuits, the vile robber knocked the clock off the wall when they scurried away with their treasure on the Wednesday, leaving it at the stuck at the time of the robbery. Look at the clock and then the weekly schedule for the teachers to see if they could have done it. Use your suspect sheet to see their initials.
